IGUAZU FALLS

About 1290 kilometers from Buenos Aires you can find the largest waterfall system in the world. Stretching almost 3km along the border of Argentina and Brazil, the falls are made up of roughly 275 different vertical drops, with heights up to 82 meters. This makes the Iguazu Falls taller than Niagara Falls and twice as wide.

SALTA PROVINCE

With its colourful peaks, outstanding mountains and cliffs, high-altitude vineyards, winding trails, gorges, dykes, salt flats, and the intense green of its valleys and Yungas, this province dazzles whoever steps on its red land. "La linda" is located 1500km north from BA and you can't miss it.

BARILOCHE

Only in a few places in the world, the four seasons are so marked by colors as in Bariloche, located at the foot of the Patagonian Andes (1600km from the capital city). Famous for its renowned International Ski Center and the best artisan chocolate, the city has a lot to offer, from beautiful landscapes to excursions and day tours.

PERITO MORENO GLACIER

It's located in Los Glaciares National Park in southwest Santa Cruz Province. Due to its magnificent natural beauty, it's considered a wonder of the world, and was declared a "World Heritage Site" by UNESCO.

Contrary to most glaciers, this one continues to grow in size, and if you are close enough you can see the awesome spectacle of ice collapsing into the water about every half an hour.

USHUAIA

Often referred to as the "end of the world", the capital of Tierra del fuego is about 3100km away from Buenos Aires, and offers more than just its stunning landscapes of glacial valleys, peat bogs, and ancient forests. Urban tours, cultural experiences, and culinary delights await visitors, providing opportunities to immerse themselves in the rich history of this mythical corner of the globe.
